Healthcare Association of New York State Recognizes Auxiliaries for Advocacy

The Healthcare Association of New York State (HANYS) is pleased to announce the 53 recipients of its 2010 Auxiliary Advocacy Recognition, which recognizes auxiliaries that have committed significant time and effort as advocates for their health care facilities and communities during the past year. To qualify, auxiliaries must meet specific criteria, such as participation in HANYS' legislative letter-writing campaigns and community outreach activities.

Health care auxiliaries play a vital role in New York State's hospitals, health systems, and local communities. They serve as valuable links between communities and the institutions they serve. HANYS established the Auxiliary Advocacy Recognition to recognize all the ways auxiliaries help strengthen New York State's health care system by advocating on behalf of health care in their communities.

HANYS congratulates the 2010 Auxiliary Advocacy Recognition recipients:
